A three-day national-level discussion event titled 'National Conference on Child Rights & Development' is planned to be organized jointly by the Kailash Satyarthi Centre for Child Rights & Development, New Delhi and Amity University Haryana, Gurgaon on October 4-6, 2021 on Zoom platform, the details of which will be sent in due course. The focus of the event will be on the steps that have been taken and are yet to be taken for Tending a Child with Care, Compassion & Concern in the times to come.

The conference will be a major event focusing on the ground realities, legal issues as well as the rights of children and youth for a just and equitable treatment. It will hopefully provide a platform for the meeting of minds for academics, activists, lawyers, judges, government, non-government associations, psychologists, medical professionals and social scientists with a common interest in the protection and development of children.

The event will also make it possible to share the best practices to promote the rights of children. The aim is to move towards formalising clear action points to strengthen child protection and development processes in India, especially for girl-children, in order to ensure their wellbeing and right to a dignified life. Although the Ministry of Social Justice and Empowerment and various state governments as well as a few NGOs are concerned about the children's issues, it is felt necessary to bring in government officials, jurists, mass media specialists, civil society organisations, philanthropists, experts and child rights practitioners from different parts of India together to pool their ideas and suggestions on a clearer roadmap for all of us.
